STOCK MARKET WEAK

Speculative Demands Prove to be Very Apathetic.

CAUSES NOT PERCEPTIBLE

Holders Are Inclined to Reduce

Their Lines and Sluggishness is Conspicuous in Metal—United States Steel is Persistent.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 20.—Specific causes were not clearly perceptible for the weakness of stocks today. The demand was apathetic, as it had been since the opening of the week, demonstrated the failure of last week's concerted rise in prices to awaken any outside interest in the market. Speculative holders of stocks have been inclined to reduce their lines ever since.

The weakness of the metal stocks was conspicuous, but this was in accordance with the special strength shown by that group last week. The persistent selling of United States Steel was of notable sentimental effect on the general market. Estimates of the earnings for the first quarter, to be reported at the director's meeting next Tuesday, accompanied the selling.

It is probable that some degree of speculative depression was reflected from the commodities markets on the stock market. This is contrary to the usual order of things, owing to the fact that declines in grain and cotton are usually promising crop prospects.

The effect of the government inquisition into the cotton pool and its threat of extension to dealings in futures in other lines, is held responsible for much of the unsettledness in those departments of speculative activity.

Bonds were heavy. Total sales, par value, $1,560,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.
